Parking Problem Statement

Author: Andrew Lim

Problem Statement:

- Students need a better way to find parking for class. Many students show up late to class since they can not find parking. Depending on the situation the student might not even go to class if they can not find parking.

Who is Experiencing This Problem?

- Everyone who experiences struggling to find a parking spot. I know many students who can't get to class on time no matter how early they leave for class. Guest to the school may not know where to park, which might result in them getting a ticket or parking far away from their destination.

What Is The Problem?

- The problem is that people without a permit struggle to find parking. Not every student can afford to get a permit so they need to park in zones where it does not require a permit. This can make students late to class or even miss it entirely. Make guests struggle to find parking making them park a far distance away.

Where Does The Problem Present Itself?

- Any college campus will have restricted parking zones, but won't tell you where the public parking is. For example, the public lot may be across campus, but you won't know that unless you drive around.

Why Does It Matter?

- Students need to go to class to learn their material and if they are late to class they miss some of that material. If there are exams that day everyone in the class will be there, therefore you can't be late or you will have less time for an exam. Also to reduce the stress of a student being late to a class.
